That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its lack of exercise and sleep—often throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. Then they may become overworked and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel nervous, tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. Are used by millions the country over. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Electric Farm Water System Promotes Comfort and Health

Old-fashioned luxuries(?) are replaced by modern conveniences.

By IRA MILLER
Rural Electrification Bureau

SECOND only to electric lights, an automatic pressure water system is the greatest boon that electricity can bring not only to the farm home but also to the farmstead. True, a modern all-electric radio outranks an electric water system in the popular choice of the average farmer. But the latter contributes so much more to his comfort, health, safety, convenience and profit that it is difficult to understand why such is the case.

Actual studies show that the typical farm home uses 20 to 30 tons of water per year, in the kitchen alone, and that the farmer and his wife take more than 200,000 steps in carrying it. The time required is equivalent to 70 eight-hour days each year. As much additional water is needed for washing clothes and for bathing. It is probable that the final figures are more nearly double those just given.

Nor does this revised estimate include water which often must be carried for the livestock, the total quantity of which frequently will be much greater than that required for the home.

In labor savings alone, an electric water system will pay for itself many times over. For, although operating costs will naturally vary with the amount of water used, the depths from which it is pumped and the cost of power, on the average farm all the water necessary to satisfy every human and animal need can be electrically supplied for two to five cents per day.

But a pressure water system brings other savings both real and potential. Plenty of fresh water will increase profits from livestock—animals will finish better, cows and chickens will produce more, and horses and mules will do more work.

When drought occurs, ample water to irrigate small or large truck gardens can be pumped from wells, streams, springs or pools—and the profit on or saving of such crops will more than pay for the electricity required.

Water under pressure is a definite safety precaution in that it provides a means of saving the home or buildings in event of a fire, especially if it is caught in the early stages.

Even more important than the savings it yields, an automatic water supply guards the family's health by providing clean, fresh water at all times. It raises the standard of living and promotes pride of ownership, as it makes possible not only a modern bathroom with its many conveniences but also a kitchen sink and laundry tubs. With the installation of an electric heater, hot as well as cold water is available at the turn of a faucet.

Although the value of an electric pressure water system on the farm is apparent the moment it is found, it is perhaps most marked when snow, sleet, ice and winter winds make each one of the seemingly endless trips to well, spring or cistern a cold and often dangerous journey.

N & W Spends 59 Millions Along Line

The Norfolk and Western Railway pays out and spends $50,000,000 annually for payrolls and purchases in the scores of communities it serves, according to a statement issued today by the railroad.

To its employes in six states, the N. & W. pays approximately $32,000,000 a year in wages and salaries, while it spends an average of $18,000,000 annually on a shopping list of 50,000 different items, "from pencils to freight cars, from steak to steel rails, from lumber to stationery, and from coal to eyesticks."

"These N. & W. purchases and payrolls," the statement said, "are no mere shot in the arm to briefly quicken the economic pulse, but are a sound, vital investment in the welfare and progress of the territory the railroad traverses."

Weevils In Stored Grain

Blacksburg, Oct. 31.- Every fall the Virginia Agricultural Extension Division issues many requests for information on the control of weevils and insects that damage peas and other crops usually stored for the winter. Plant pathologists of the Extension Service say in reply:

The most satisfactory method of killing insects in storage is fumigation with carbon disulphide, a liquid which on exposure to air turns quickly to a heavy gas. The bin or container must be made air-tight in order to confine the gas.

The liquid is used at the rate of one pound to 100 cubic feet of air space to be fumigated; for small quantities, one teaspoonful to a cubic foot.

The carbon disulphide should be poured onto burlap bags placed on the grain and the whole top of the bin or container covered tightly. If fumigation is to be done in a large bin or crib with tight sides and bottoms, fairly good results may be obtained by covering the grain, after the liquid is poured on, with canvas, blankets or similar material. Since this will not give an air-tight job, it is well to increase the amount of the liquid used.

Unless the bin or crib can be tightly closed up after fumigation, the grain will become reinfested with insects, and it will be necessary to fumigate a second time.

Treatment with carbon disulphide is most effective at a temperature of about 75 degrees Fahrenheit. It is not effective below 60 degrees.

Carbon disulphide is highly inflamable and care must be exercised in using it.

For further information on fumigation problems, see your county agent.

Prompt Help For A Listless Child

Scolding won't help a boy or girl who is listless, dull or cross from constipation. But, here's something that will!

If sluggish bowels have your child headachy, bilious, upset, give him a little Syrup of Black-Draught tonight. Like the original famed BLACK-DRAUGHT, its principal ingredient is an intestinal tonic-laxative. Helps impart tone to the bowel muscles.

Children like the taste of Syrup of Black-Draught. It is an all vegetable product. When simple directions are followed, its action is gentle, but prompt and complete. Comes in two sizes: 50c and 25c.
